ART IN DESIGN

With constantly evolving landscapes that won't easily bend to our wishes, the backyard needs flexibility (and lightness) with its outdoor furnishings. California-based Made Goods embraces that philosophy and the weather with a generous new outdoor collection that features rattan, teak, resin and concrete. With this series, the company reveals their take on the material of the moment—or the last two years—terrazzo. The charming Juliette dining table and a suite of equally winsome offerings like Madelyn side table and Castiel stool flaunt the happy, livable side of the material. madegoods.com

With Club Tropicalia, the cult New Zealand brand Mokum Textiles brings verve to outdoor fabrics that are just as stylishly suited for interiors. Rather than chase one environment exclusively, the line answers to both with a series that represents the first time Mokum has digitally printed on an outdoor basecloth. The vivacious Tropicalia print was created by the inimitable Catherine Martin, the Oscar-winning costume and production designer who knows something about color, mood, context and lingering impressions. South Beach Stripe is an outdoor velvet, and another first for the mill with an impressive construction. jamesdunioptextiles.com
